September 24th, 2020 1:00 pm-3:00 pm (Virtual Session Live Online Via Zoom)

Drama, drama, drama—every facet of our culture is steeped in it... And, no matter the role we play or the rank we hold, no one is immune to its effects. Now, more than ever before, we need leaders who can rise above the drama to effectively propel their teams toward success.

Drama disrupts productivity, interferes with engagement, hijacks joy, and delays results. And worse, it impedes innovation—which we desperately require during these times of rapid and intense change. But it doesn't have to be this way!

When you know what's driving drama in the workplace or anywhere else in your life, you can learn to respond to it effectively and create the success you truly aspire to. The result isn't a destination, but a way of living, a way that can make your work life easier, more fun, and more fulfilling.

Upon completion of this session, participants will:

- Learn the new definition of drama and understand why we have it so you can identify when it's active in your workplace or other areas of life, before it sucks you in
- Discover the easy neuroscience of what's happening in the brain when drama is present and receive simple strategies to shift into a thriving mentality
- Pick up tools to effectively navigate OPD- other people's drama- so you are empowered to transform difficult situations into opportunities to thrive
