LIFE and life

As I completed my first year on the LIFE Board, it's easy to reflect on the value of the LIFE program and topic of life. LIFE (Learning Is For Ever) provides the avenue to engage your life in learning about a plethora of topics that you might not ordinarily sample. From current events, history, travel, humanities, food, to discussion groups, day trips and Broadway shows - you have the opportunity to sample topics of potential interest with a minimum of time commitment. Most classes are a few hours in duration and provide the introduction to a topic (or delve into a specific area) that you might have an interest, but not want to commit for lengthier course of study. The learning environment at RCTC provides the opportunity to socially engage with others in the class or you can quietly sit by yourself and just focus on the topic and material being presented.

At times your own life is busy with volunteering, visiting family, traveling and even mundane tasks around the house, but it's great to have the opportunity to fulfill your life's ongoing need to continue your learning on a wide range of topics. That is what LIFE provides. Make use of this opportunity - try a new class that you previously had no interest in the topic, or something that was a curiosity but you didn't want to make a longer commitment to study, or even just a spontaneous fun topic. A few hours and a few dollars invested in yourself is well worth it for your life!

Important Information...

First, thanks to everyone who donated to the LIFE Program for the 2018-19 academic year! Your donations keep the LIFE Program rolling! When you return this fall, the classroom numbers will be updated. I have included on the class calendars which exterior door to enter to be close to the classroom. Please use this as a helpful guide. The Harvest Dinner will feature Charlie Pappas speaking on the impact of the World's Fairs on our everyday life. Join Us!
